Monitoring

6.a. Key Indicators for Measuring the State of Conservation

In accordance with the “State of Conservation and Factors Affecting the Property” outlined in Chapter 4, the component parts of the property and the buffer zone are to be monitored on a regular basis, with the goal of effectively maintaining the Outstanding Universal Value of the property, and enhancing institutional capacity and improving skills concerning repairs, restoration work, maintenance, disaster prevention and crisis management.

In monitoring the property, indicators for potential threats identified in section 4.b, “Factors Affecting the Property,” are selected with the following three guidelines in mind. Selected monitoring indicators and measurement methods are shown in Table 6-1.

- (1) Whether the Outstanding Universal Value, authenticity and integrity of the property as described in Chapter 3 of this nomination dossier, “Justification for Inscription”, are being maintained;
- (2) What degrees of impact potential threats (such as development pressures, environmental pressures, natural disasters, and visitation) may have; threats are described in Chapter 4 of this nomination dossier, “State of Conservation and Factors Affecting the Property”; and
- (3) Whether protective measures for the property and its buffer zone, together with policies for its presentation and utilization, are being properly implemented, as outlined in Chapter 5 of this nomination dossier, “Protection and Management of the Property”.

	f) Number of training workshops and seminars held	Record the number of training workshops and seminars held.	Every year	Fukuoka Prefecture, Munakata City, Fukutsu City

* In addition to routine periodic monitoring, special monitoring should also be conducted as necessary shortly after natural disasters such as typhoons, heavy rains, or earthquakes strike the area.

6.b Administrative Arrangements for Monitoring the Property

Monitoring of the property, including periodic reporting, will be carried out by the owners of each of its component parts, i.e. Munakata City, Fukutsu City, and Munakata Taisha, under the supervision of the Agency for Cultural Affairs, through Fukuoka Prefecture. In the process of monitoring these sites, the condition of the property is assessed and recorded each fiscal year, and a cumulative report on the status of its preservation and management is compiled every six years to be submitted to the World Heritage Committee via the UNESCO World Heritage Centre, in accordance with the “Operational Guidelines for the Implementation of the World Heritage Convention”.

The monitoring system for this property, which is in operation, is shown in Table 6-2.
